New York, January 12,—The cotton market opened steady, with prices unchanged to 3 points bigher, after which changes were confined to a bare point or so, with specu-lation restricted to week-end pr-feasional set lements as a general thing. The shorts, were made extreme y timid and cautious by telegraph with instructions to "ship at office and follow with tracer." Inter-or points maintain former full figures, confident that such will be realized as soon as the wheels of trade got regularly in motion for the new year. Whatever may be the true in-mardness of the situation, externally there is marked strength, some of the holders of ordinary grades adopting the faconic motto, "four or fight," proposing to have such fis-ure or deter sales until the approach of the new crop. new crop.

Cables and correspondence from abroad note quiet features, with disposition on part of buyers and sellers to await new crop developments before even normal movement is resumed.

Speculative sentiment took on the nervous bigh-strung characteristics which have rehigh-strung characteristics which have recently caused wide and excited fluctuations in some stock or group of stocks, which were affected by some important development or a rumor of some development. Today it was the local traction group led by Manhattan. The erratic fluctuations of this stock made it evident that the violence of the movement was in great part due to the existence of a large short interest which manifested acute distress on the advance, which served the stock up 214 points with a subsequent relapse of a points. The sudden advance is the local tractions was taken ad. He was the local tractions was taken and the local tractions was taken and the local tractions was taken ad. Retewars reaching the point of extermication had brought the level of freight rates down to an unprofitable level and the structure and equipment of railways made them inefficient instruments for chesp transportation. Even the growth of freight charges therefor could not be taken advantage of. Only expert railway men are competent to inders and the marvefous increase in economic efficiency of railways as instruments of tromportation by better equipment, improvement of operating methods and permanent structures, cutting down annual charges for repair and maintenance. With competition constantly forcing the freight rate downward, the keep rivalry in the improvement of facilities, the carly increases of carnings were practically all reinvested in improvement of facilities, the carly increases of carnings were practically all reinvested in improvement of facilities, the carly increases of carnings were practically all reinvested in improving the property. Stockholde a hopes of sharing profits were thus long deterred.

A perusal of annual reports of the great railway systems of the gard few years shows how large are the amount of current armings used for permanent improvements and betterments, and which may justifiably be expected to result in reduction of annual charges in the future. Nothing has served to check the obstinate downward course of short rates or to prevent rate suiting and duscrimination. The Federal government, recorning its evils, attempted to secure the observance of uniform rates by conceiling the interstate commerce law. But the nutries law at the same time made it a punishable offense for corporations to form in a vertical report rates for charges.
